

From a product snapshot to five decisions

Hair-colour category opportunity review

What to examine. Who should own the check.
What evidence would justify the next step.

A FOCUSED REVIEW

The issue: decisions are buried in separate data

A snapshot can point to questions. It cannot explain every cause.

SKU performance

Sales, units, margin,
status and stock

Product metadata

Brand, shade, supplier
and seasonality

Competitor signals

Observed products,
prices and trends

Competing questions

- 1 Availability
- 2 Listing
- 3 Range
- 4 Margins

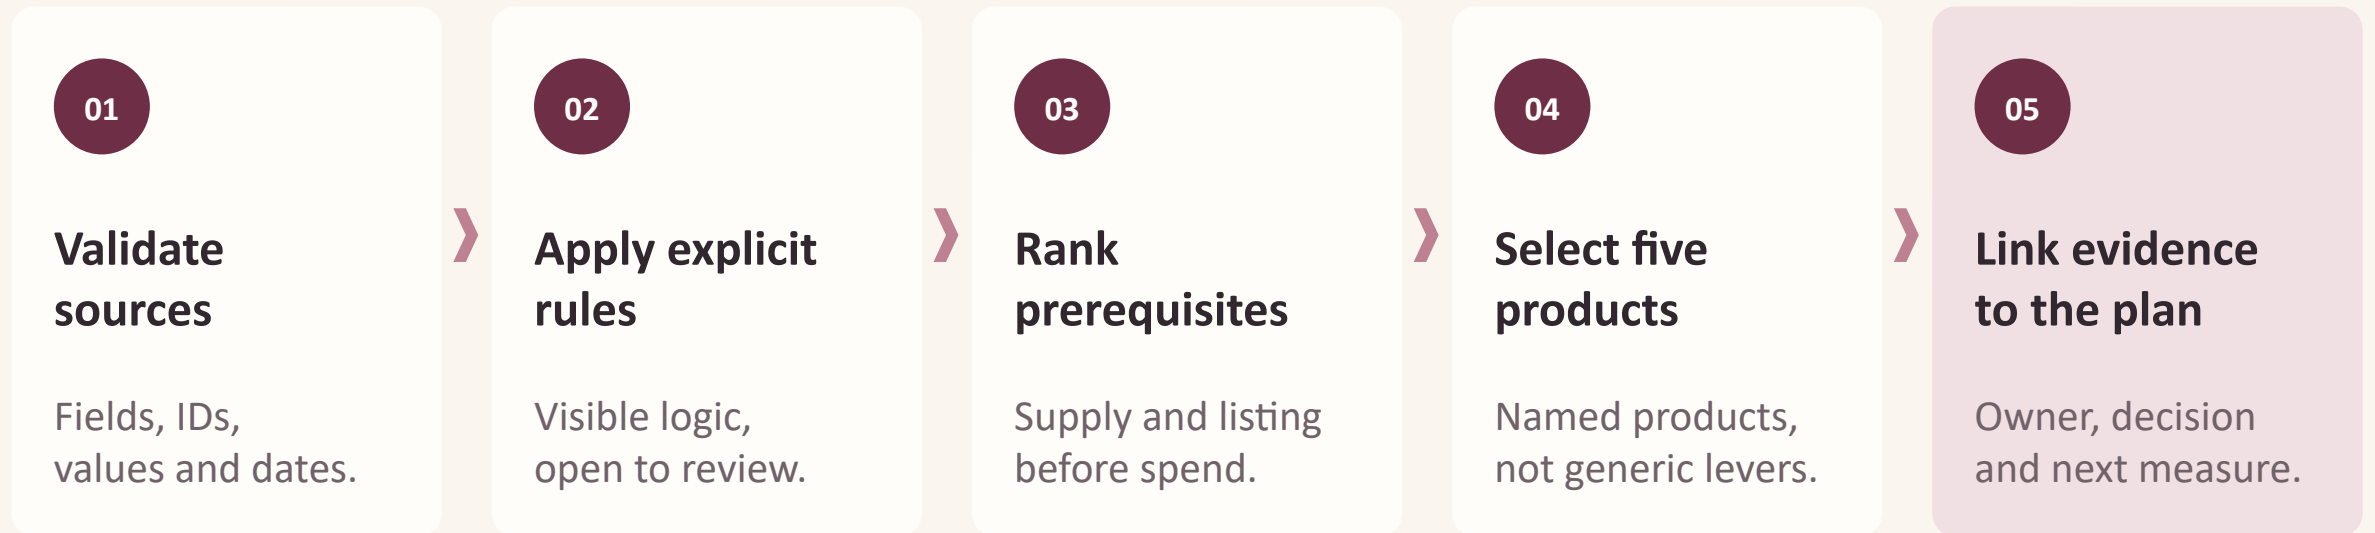

Inactive $\neq$ unwanted

Weak sales $\neq$ a stock cause

Needed: a short, defensible action list—not a causal verdict.

Our approach: facts first, action second

Operational prerequisites come before the biggest-looking number.

Built Repeatable analysis + a self-contained local dashboard

Explicit rules, not machine learning. Human approval, not automated commercial execution.

The analysis creates a focused review agenda

Rule matches identify what to examine—not proven problems.

33

Availability reviews

9 out of stock + 24 low stock

2

Zero-sales checks

Listing, mapping or feed validation

19

Reactivation reviews

Understand the reason for inactivity

17

Promotion-test candidates

Validate economics before a small test

Five decisions for the next category review

Proposed owners and next checks—not approved commercial actions.

Market figures are demand proxies. Inactivity reasons and stock duration remain unknown.

Financial scenarios guide questions, not promises

Supplied 12-week window · all primary-action SKU cases, not just the five decisions.

NO REALISED BENEFIT MEASURED

Revenue benchmark-distance scenario

€93k

Distance to a typical peer ratio
in the same subcategory.

Not a sales forecast.

Gross-profit benchmark scenario

€24.9k

Current revenue held constant;
margin moved to the peer median.

Not additional revenue or net profit.

Separate measures. Do not add them. No annualisation.

Not guarantees or upper bounds. Costs, elasticity and cannibalisation are not modelled; period end unknown.

What changes for stakeholders

Traceability and accountability are built in. Commercial outcomes still need testing.

Before

A signal can be discussed without an owner, a decision or a measured follow-through.

Now: a proposed owner and a measurable next checkpoint

CL

Category lead

Own review decisions

Decision completeness:
accept/defer, owner and date

SP

Supply planner

Validate stock and feed

Availability confirmed;
then units and gross profit

EC

E-commerce

Validate listing and sales feed

First confirmed sales;
units and gross profit

BF

Buyer + finance

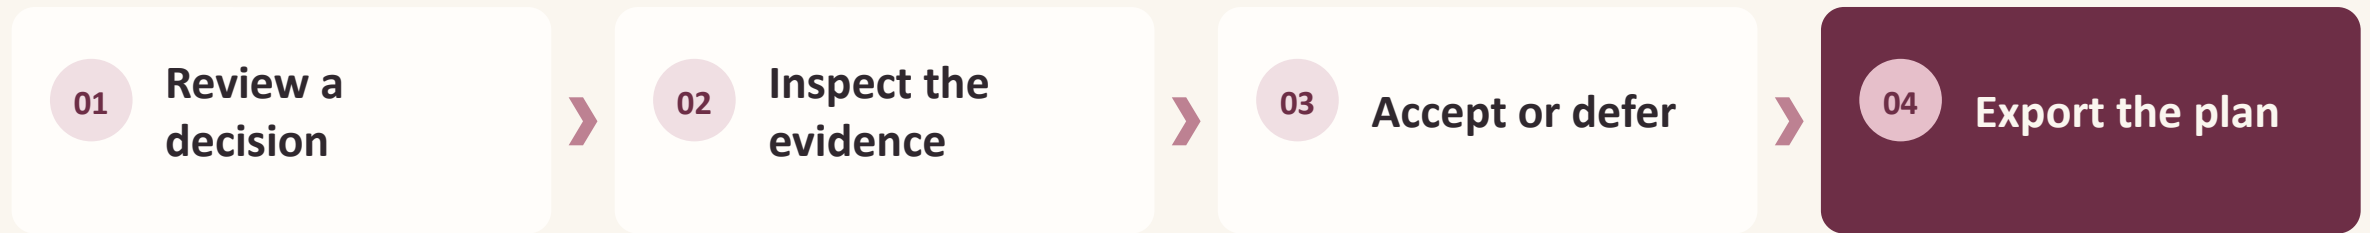

Check costs, terms and tests

Gross profit + units;
include commercial costs

Proposed responsibilities, not assigned tasks. No adoption or time-saving benefit has been measured.

A usable workflow, with clear limits

A browser-local plan supports the review. It is not yet a shared workflow system.

Ready to use locally

Owners, due dates, progress and notes

Source record / row drilldown

CSV exports; no external UI dependency

Plans stay in this browser. Export before moving.

Know the evidence limits

1 Jul 2026 observations · 81 days old

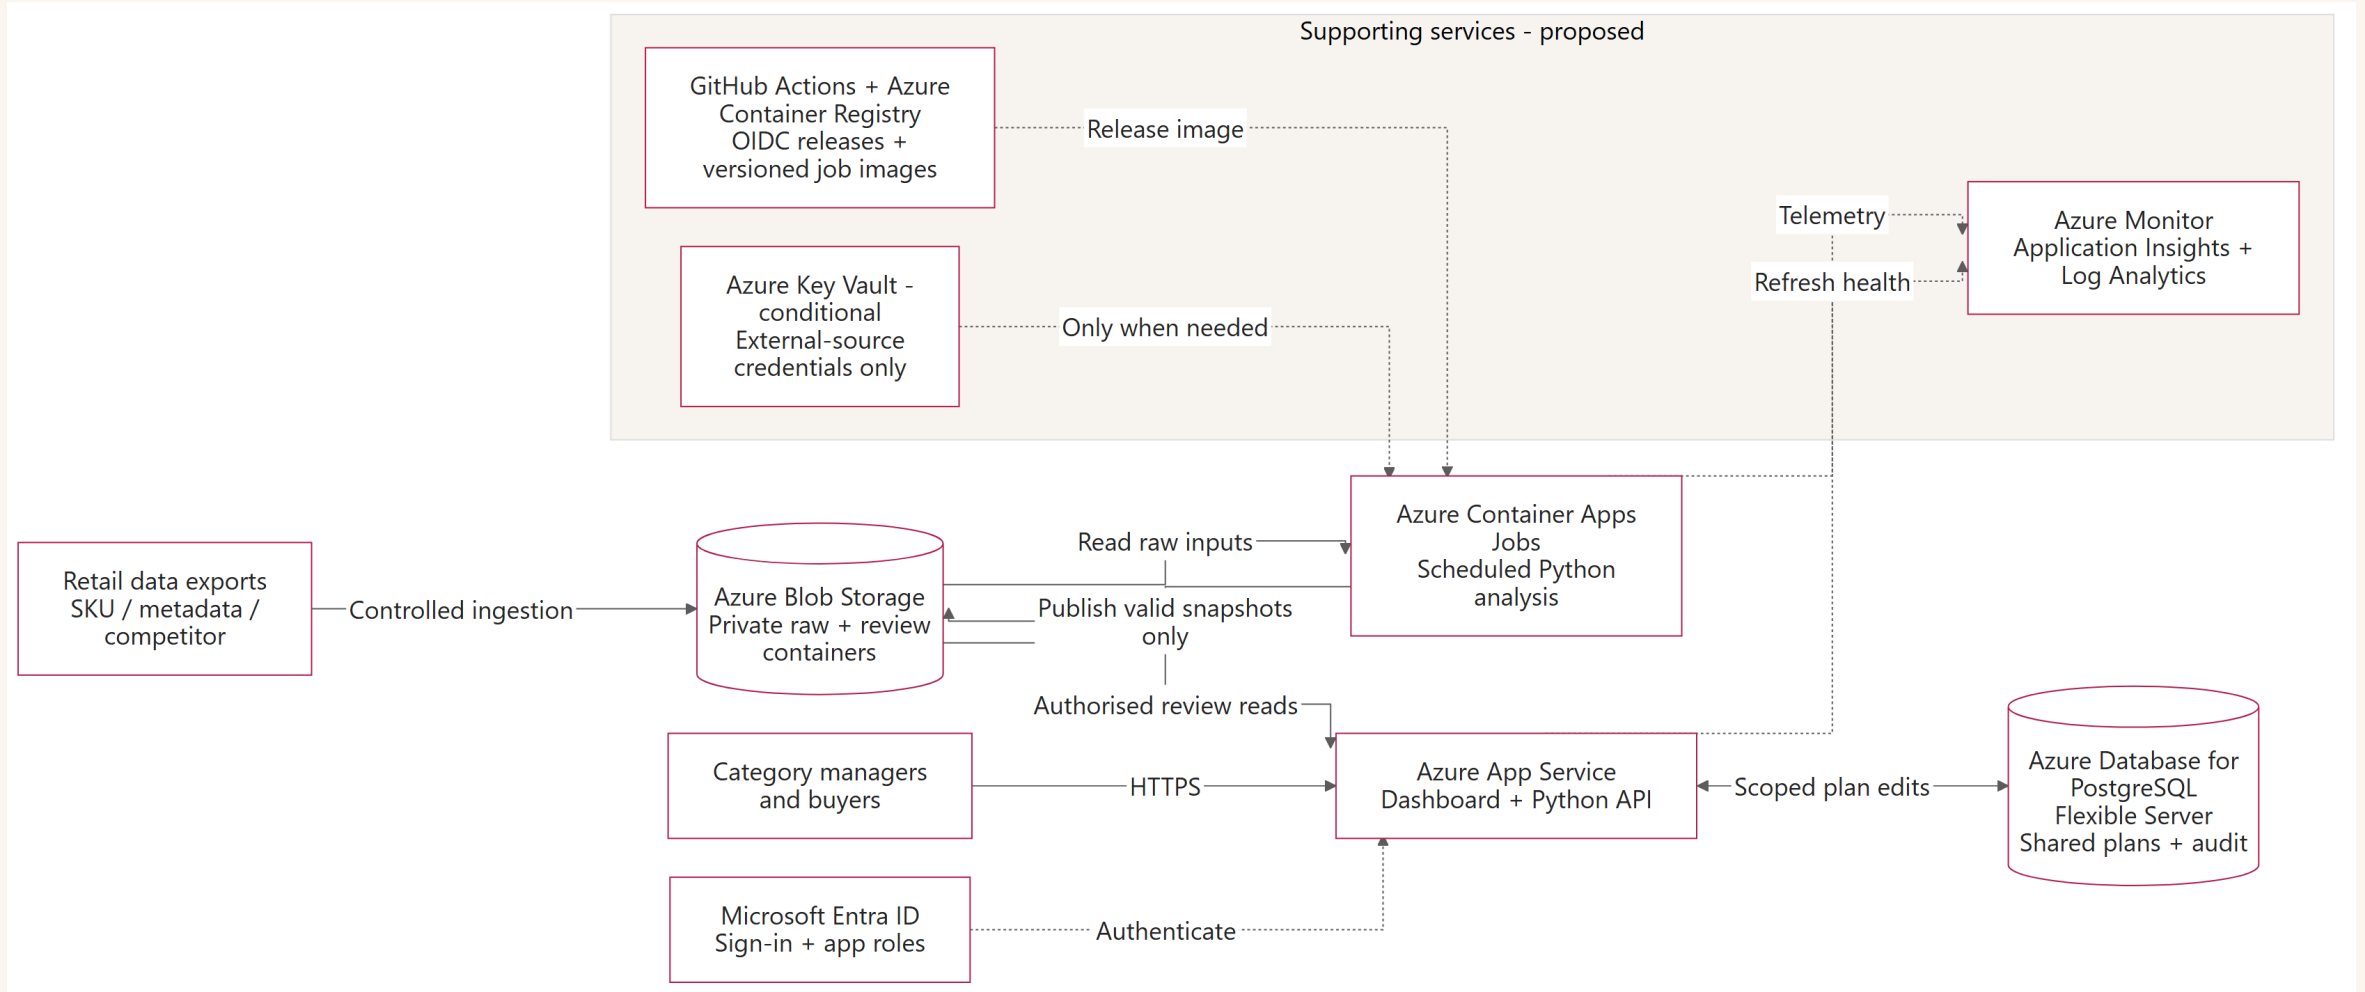

4 invalid popularity scores excluded

12-week end and stock-snapshot date unknown

Accepting a plan item does not change stock, prices or assortment.

A production path on Azure — proposed, not deployed

Today: local dashboard + browser storage. API, SSO and shared plans are not implemented.

Validate, pilot, measure.

Sponsor a controlled pilot,
not a promised uplift.

Name the category owner.

Confirm source access and freshness.

Agree success criteria before testing.
